

Classroom Management: Preventing and Responding to Disruptive Students In and Out of the Classroom

Over the last ten years, there has been an increase in the number and severity of behavioral incidents in the classrooms and on campuses. More and more, it is incumbent upon instructors to intervene in the classroom to address behaviors that can interfere with teaching and learning. Using a combination of lecture and case studies taken from actual incidents, this workshop will provide instructors with tools to appropriately address these behaviors. Participants will be provided with skills to prevent disruptive behaviors, to appropriately react to them, and tips on how to enhance their own campus procedures to address abhorrent behaviors.

Presented by W. Scott Lewis, J.D. and partner with the National Center for Higher Education Risk Management. Scott brings over fifteen years of unique experience, serving simultaneously as a student affairs administrator, faculty administrator, crisis/behavioral team chair, faculty member, and consultant in higher education at both public and private institutions.

This FREE presentation will be offered at 3 different times—all presentations will be at the I Hotel and Conference Center, Technology Room.
